Connecting Staff Women

Who We Are

Connecting Staff Women (CSW) welcomes all staff women interested in personal and professional development at the University of Denver.

History

CSW was formally WAC (Women Advocating Change) and was first organized in 1997-98 as one of six DU women 's groups that include the Women 's Leadership Council (for senior women administrators), the Women 's Faculty Association, Graduate and Undergraduate Women 's Councils, and the Staff Women 's Association & Network.

Collaboration

All six women 's groups communicate and work together through representation on the Women 's Coalition.

Scholarship Information

CSW has limited scholarship funds available for staff women to pay for conferences and workshops that support professional development. For more information contact Rachel Grafton (rachel.grafton@du.edu)

Meeting Overview

CSW meets monthly during the academic year and for an end of year retreat.

In our meetings, we focus on issues, projects, and programming important to women who find themselves in the middle of their lives and careers.

CSW also maintains a listserv of participants.

Topics of discussion include:

- How to balance work and personal life.
- How to act as effective mentors to each other and other women.
- How to prepare an effective career management plan and make the most of your career.
- How to receive fair compensation and recognition for our work.
- How to increase effective communication on campus at all levels.
