

THE 6TH INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM OF THE CENTER FOR CHINA-US COOPERATION

“WASHINGTON CONSENSUS” VERSUS “BEIJING CONSENSUS”
SUSTAINABILITY OF CHINA’S DEVELOPMENT MODEL

MAY 30-31, 2008
DENVER, COLORADO

CO-SPONSORED BY

CENTER FOR CHINA STUDIES, NATIONAL TAIWAN UNIVERSITY
THE CENTER FOR CHINA-US COOPERATION, UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

Participant Biographies

Jacque deLisle is an expert in contemporary Chinese law and politics. DeLisle’s research focuses on the law and politics of the People’s Republic of China, China’s approach to international law, Taiwan’s international status, legal change and economic reform in China, Hong Kong’s transition to and political-legal development under Chinese rule, and public international law. His writings on these subjects appear in a variety of fora, including international relations journals, edited volumes of multidisciplinary scholarship, and Asian studies journals, as well as law reviews. His Op-Eds and commentaries on law, politics and foreign policy regularly appear in newspapers and specialized foreign policy and Asian affairs media. DeLisle is Director of Asia Programs at the Foreign Policy Research Institute, a member of the faculty of the Center for East Asian Studies at the University of Pennsylvania, and a member of the National Committee on U.S.- China Relations. He has served frequently as an expert witness on issues of P.R.C. law and government policies. He is also a consultant, lecturer and advisor to foreign-assisted legal reform, development and education programs, primarily in China, including the Temple University - Tsinghua University Masters of Law Program.

Bruce Dickson is professor of political science and international affairs at the George Washington University in Washington, DC. Professor Dickson received his B.A. in political science and English literature, his M.A. in Chinese Studies, and his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Michigan. He teaches on China, comparative politics, and democratization. Professor Dickson is currently examining the political consequences of economic reform in China, and in particular the relationship between private entrepreneurs and the Chinese Communist Party. For the 2006-07 academic year, he received a fellowship from the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. His most recent book is Wealth into Power: The Communist Party's Embrace of China's Private Sector (Cambridge, 2008).

Doug Guthrie is Professor of Management and Daniel P. Paduano Faculty Fellow at the Stern School of Business of New York University. He is also the Faculty Director for Custom and Non-Degree Executive Education at Stern. In addition, Professor Guthrie holds an appointment as Professor of Sociology on NYU’s Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Professor Guthrie’s areas of expertise lie in the fields of leadership, corporate governance, corporate social responsibility and economic reform in China. His work in these areas includes Dragon in a Three-Piece Suit: The Emergence of Capitalism in China (Princeton University Press, 1999), China and Globalization: The Social, Economic, and Political Transformation of Chinese Society (Routledge, 2006, 2008), and China’s Radical Transformation: Economic Reform, Global Integration, and Political Change in the World’s Largest Nation (Polity, forthcoming). His research has been funded by the Ford Foundation, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, and the Social Science Research Council. He has also served as the Director of the Business Institutions Initiative and the Program on the Corporation as a Social Institution at the Social Science Research Council. Professor Guthrie has also taught at Harvard Business School, INSEAD and the Graduate Schools of Business at Stanford University, Columbia University and Emory University. He received his B.A. in Chinese literature from the University of Chicago and his Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of California, Berkeley.

S. Philip Hsu is Executive Director at the Center for China Studies, and Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, College of Social Sciences, National Taiwan University. He received his doctoral degree from Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver, in November 1998. His major areas of research include domestic political economy and local governance of China, international security and economic interactions in East Asia, and comparative political economy of East Asia. His articles were published in Issues & Studies, Journal of Contemporary China, Cambridge Review of International Affairs, among others.

Szu-chien Hsu is an Assistant Researcher Fellow of the Institute of Political Science at Academia Sinica. Dr. Hsu's research interests include Mainland China's political reform, China's "developmental state" in high-tech economic sectors, and cross-strait relations. On China's political reform, Dr. Hsu works on how the unchanged nature of China's party-state constrains the legal rationality tendency of the political reform. He is also interested in how the concept of "democracy" is perceived in Chinese society and how such perception affects the political reform. On cross-strait relations, Dr. Hsu focuses on how the regional geopolitical conditions constraint the cross-strait relations. Dr. Szu-chien Hsu earned his B.A. in political science from National Taiwan University, Taiwan, and his M.A. and Ph.D. also in political science from Columbia University in the City of New York.

Gary Jefferson writes about institutions, technology, economic growth, and China's economic transformation. At Brandeis University, Jefferson has joint appointments in the Department of Economics and the International Business School, where he teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in the economics of innovation, development economics, and China. He also teaches a course on the Political Economy of China at the Fletcher School at Tufts. Jefferson's publications include, Enterprise Reform in China: Ownership, Transition, and Performance (Oxford University Press, 2000), "What is Driving China's Decline in Energy Intensity?" Resource and Energy Economics (2004). "An Investigation of Firm-Level R&D Capabilities in East Asia," Innovation and Production Networking in East Asia, ed. Shahid Yusuf (2004), "R&D and Technology Transfer: Firm-Level Evidence from Chinese Industry," Review of Economics and Statistics, "Privatization and Restructuring in China: Evidence from Shareholding Ownership" Journal of Comparative Economics (2006), and "The Sources and Sustainability of China's Economic Growth," Brookings Papers on Economic Activity (2006). Jefferson's research is supported by the National Science Foundation and the Department of Energy. A graduate of Dartmouth College (A.B.) and Yale University (Ph.D.), Jefferson has lived and taught at the Chinese University of Hong Kong and at Wuhan University in China and frequently travels to China for his research and speaking engagements. He recently spent his spring 2007 sabbatical at the Development Economics Research Center at Wuhan University, the Center for Chinese Economic Studies at Fudan University, and the Center for Chinese Economic Research at Peking University.

Scott Kennedy (Ph.D., George Washington University, 2002) is Associate Professor in the Departments of Political Science and East Asian Languages & Cultures and Director of the Research Center for Chinese Politics & Business at Indiana University. A specialist on Chinese politics and political economy, his research interests include government-business relations, policymaking, and global governance. He is author of The Business of Lobbying in China (Harvard University Press, 2005), as well as articles in China Quarterly, China Journal, Political Science Quarterly, World Policy Journal, Business & Society, Problems of Post-Communism, and China Business Review. He currently is engaged in two research projects: "Mandarins Playing Capitalist Games: How China Is Reshaping Global Governance" examines the growing Chinese government and industry participation in global regimes, including technical standards, antidumping, competition policy, and credit rating. "The Politics of Lobbying in China" uses quantitative and qualitative methods to investigate the evolution of corporate political activity in China. For more information, see <http://mypage.iu.edu/~kennedys/>.

Chien-wen Kou obtained his Doctoral (PhD) degree from the University of Texas at Austin in 1999. He is now an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science and a Joint Appointed Associate Research Fellow of the Institute of International Relations at National Chengchi University. His major research interests include Chinese politics, political elites, comparative communist studies, and civil-military relations. Publications include articles in Issues & Studies, Weti Yu Yanjiu [Issues and Studies], Zhengzhi Xuebao [Chinese Political Science Review], Zhongguo Dalu Yanjiu [Mainland China Studies], Taiwan Zhengzhi Xuekan (Taiwan Political Science Review), Yuanjing Jijinhui Jikan [Prospect Quarterly], Lilun Yu Zhengce [Theory and Policy], and Dongya Yanjiu [East Asian Studies]. He is also the author of Zhonggong Jingying Zhengzhi De Yanbian: Zhiduhua Yu Quanli Zhuanyi, 1978-2004 [The evolution of Chinese elite politics – Institutionalization and power transfer, 1978-2004] (Taipei: Wunan, 2005).

Jianfei Liu is a professor and research fellow at the Institute of International Strategic Studies, the Central Party School of C.P.C., and director of division of Chinese Foreign Affairs of the institute. He received his B.A. in Politics from Qiqihar Normal College, Heilongjiang, in 1982, his M.A. in International Politics from China Renmin University in 1989, and his Doctorate in International Politics from Peking University in 1999. He also received graduate training in Government at the London School of Economics and Political Science in 1993-1994. In 2003-2004, he studied as visiting scholar at Fairbank Center for East Asian Research of Harvard University and The Atlantic Council of the United States. Prof. Liu's major is International Relations. His most recent research fields are U.S. foreign policy, China's foreign policy and Sino-U.S. relations. His major works are 'America and Anti-communism: Ideology-based U.S. Foreign Policy' (Chinese Social Science Press, 2001), 'Sino-US-Japan Strategic Relations in 21st Century' (Central Party School Press, 2002), 'Sino-U.S.-Japan Relations on Strategy 1899-1999' (Central Party Literature Press, 2000), 'The Great Game: China's Tai Ji vs. America's Boxing' (Zhejiang Renmin Press, 2005). He has published more than 150 articles on international studies.

Barry Naughton, is an economist who specializes on China. His most recent book is The Chinese Economy: Transitions and Growth (Cambridge: MIT Press), a comprehensive overview and textbook that appeared this year. Naughton is the So Kuanlok Professor of Chinese and International Affairs at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies of the University of California at San Diego. He has published extensively on the Chinese economic transition, industry and trade in China and Chinese political economy. His pioneering study of Chinese economic reform, Growing Out of the Plan: Chinese Economic Reform, 1978-1993 (New York: Cambridge University Press, 1995) won the Masayoshi Ohira Memorial Prize. He has edited three books, including The China Circle: Economics and Technology in the PRC, Taiwan and Hong Kong (Brooking Institution, 1997) and (with Dali Yang), Holding China Together: Diversity and National Integration in the Post-Deng Era (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2004). Naughton also publishes quarterly online analysis at China Leadership Monitor (available at www.hoover.org/publications/clm/)

Thomas G. Rawski is Professor of Economics and History and UCIS Research Professor at the University of Pittsburgh. His research focuses on the development and modern history of China's economy, including studies of China's reform mechanism and achievements, as well as analyses focused on productivity, investment, industry, trade, labor markets, environment, and economic measurement. His publications include books on Economic Growth and Employment in China; China's Transition to Industrialism; and Economic Growth in Prewar China; as well as several collaborative volumes: Chinese History in Economic Perspective; Economics and the Historian; China's Rise and the Balance of Influence in Asia and a new volume on China's Great Economic Transformation. Rawski, a former president of the Association for Comparative Economic Studies, was as a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar during 2006/07. He is a former board member and currently serves on the finance and budget committees of the Association for Asian Studies.

Scott Rozell holds the Helen Farnsworth Endowed Professorship at Stanford University and is Senior Fellow and Professor in the Shorenstein Asia-Pacific Research Center, Freeman Spogli Institute (FSI) for International Studies. He currently also is an adjunct professor in the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics, University of California, Davis. Dr. Rozelle received his B.S. from UC, Berkeley, M.S. and Ph.D. from Cornell University. Before arriving at Stanford, Scott was a professor at the University of California (1998-2007) and an assistant professor in the Food Research Institute and Department of Economics at Stanford University (1990-1998). Currently, he is a member of the American Economics Association, American Agricultural Economics Association, International Association for Agricultural Economists, Asian Studies Association and Association of Comparative Economics and is an associate editor of Economic Development and Cultural Change and on the editorial board of Agricultural Economics, Contemporary Economic Policy, China Journal, and the China Economic Review. Professor Rozelle has received numerous honors and awards in recognition of his outstanding achievements. He was the U.C. Davis 2000 Chancellor Fellow, an award given each year to on the university's outstanding faculty professor. In 2007 he was made Fellow of the American Agricultural Economics Association, the highest honor in the Association. Dr. Rozelle's research focuses almost exclusively on China and is concerned with three general themes; a) agricultural policy, including the supply, demand, and trade in agricultural projects, b) the emergence and evolution of markets and other economic institutions in the transition process and their implications for equity and efficiency; and c) the economics of poverty and inequality. In the past several years his papers have been published in top academic journals, including Science, Nature, American Economic Review and the Journal of Economic Literature. He is fluent in Chinese and has established a research program in which he has close working ties with several Chinese collaborators and policy makers. He is the chair of the International Advisory Board of the Center for Chinese Agricultural Policy; a co-director of the Agricultural Issues Center (University of California); and a member of Stanford's new Food, Security and the Environment Program.

Dechao Sun is a P.h.D candidate in cooperation between the Center for China-US Cooperation at Josef Korbel School of International Studies in Denver University and School of Administration in Jilin University. He pays more attention to government and politics of contemporary China. In 2006, with the financial help of Tokyo Foundation in Japan, he went to Sao Paulo University of Brazil to have cooperated study—On the Ability of Local Government between China and Latin America. In 2007, with the financial help of The Chinese University of Hong Kong, he attended Third Annual Graduate Seminar on China, the paper he submit is Historic Analysis and Comparative Analysis: The Development, Revelation and Perspective of Financial Relations between Central and Local Governments in China. In 2008, with the financial help of China Scholarship Council, he went to Denver University of America to have cooperated study—On the Comparison of Fiscal Transfer from Central Government to Local Governments between China and America. His articles have appeared in Social Science, On the Control of Administrative Procedure to the power of administrative freedom, Marxism & Reality, The Harmony between central government and local governments: The Political Foundation of Harmonious Society, and elsewhere.

Yi-feng Tao (Ph.D. Columbia University 2001) currently serves as Associate Professor of Political Science at National Taiwan University. Her teaching and research interests include Chinese politics, East Asian political economy, and democratization theories. She has published research and commentary articles on China's financial reforms, FDI policies, and political business cycle. Her current research focus is on a comparative study of the political responses to China's economic rise among East Asian countries.

Hsin Hsien Wang is an associate professor of the department of Public Administration and Policy at National Taipei University, Taipei, Taiwan. He received the B.S. degree in Public Administration from National Chung Hsing University (now Taipei University) in 1992 and the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in East Asian Studies from National Chengchi University in 1996 and 2002, respectively. His current research interests are: political economy, comparative politics and state theory, with an emphasis on bureaucracy system and state-society relationship in contemporary China. Based on numerous fieldwork, his most recent publications are Contending Theories of Chinese Social Organizations: The Perspective of State-society Relationship (2006) and several articles in the fields of political economy and the politics of social organizations development in China.

Shaoguang Wang is (Ph.D. in Political Science from Cornell University in 1990) is the Chair and Professor of Government & Public Administration at the Chinese University of Hong Kong, the Changjiang Professor in the School of Public Policy and Management at Tsinghua University, a non-official member of Hong Kong Government's Commission on Strategic Development, and the chief editor of The China Review, an interdisciplinary journal on greater China. He taught at Tsjiao High School in Wuhan, China from 1972 to 1977 and at Yale University in the United States from 1990 to 2000. He has authored, co-authored, and edited 20 books in Chinese and English. In addition, he has contributed to numerous edited volumes and journals. His research interests include political economy, comparative politics, fiscal politics, democratization, and economic and political development in former socialist countries and East Asian countries.

Yu-Shan Wu is a distinguished research fellow and director of the Institute of Political Science at Academia Sinica, Taiwan. He is also a jointly appointed professor at the Department of Political Science, National Taiwan University. His research is focused on comparative socialist transitions (both political and economic), democratic consolidation and constitutional engineering in nascent democracies, cross-Strait relations, and international relations theories.

Suisheng Zhao is Professor and Executive Director of the Center for China-US Cooperation at Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver. He is founder and editor of the Journal of Contemporary China, a member of the Board of Governors of the US Committee of the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific (USCSCAP), a member of National Committee on US-China Relations, a Research Associate at the Fairbanks Center for East Asian Research in Harvard University, and a honorary jianzhi professor at Beijing University, Renmin University and Fudan University. A Campbell National Fellow at Hoover Institution of Stanford University, he was Associate Professor of Political Science/International Studies at Washington College in Maryland, Associate Professor of Government/East Asian Politics at Colby College in Maine and visiting assistant professor at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies, University of California-San Diego. He received a Ph.D. degree in political science from the University of California-San Diego, a M.A. degree in Sociology from the University of Missouri and a M.A. degree in economics from Peking University. He is the author and editor of nine books. His most recent books are: China and the United States, Cooperation and Competition in Northeast Asia (Palgrave/Macmillan, 2009) China-US Relations Transformed: Perspectives and Strategic Interactions (Routledge, 2008), Debating Political Reform in China: Rule of Law versus Democratization (M. E. Sharpe, 2006), A Nation-State by Construction: Dynamics of Modern Chinese Nationalism (Stanford University Press, 2004), Chinese Foreign Policy: Pragmatism and Strategic Behavior (M. E. Sharpe, 2003), China and Democracy: Reconsidering the Prospects for a Democratic China (Routledge, 2000), Across the Taiwan Strait: Mainland China, Taiwan, and the Crisis of 1995-96 (Routledge, 1999). His articles have appeared in Political Science Quarterly, The Wilson Quarterly, Washington Quarterly, International Politik, The China Quarterly, World Affairs, Asian Survey, Asian Affairs, Journal of Democracy, Pacific Affairs, Communism and Post-Communism Studies, Problems of Post-Communism, Issues and Studies, and elsewhere.