Teachers
There are a number of programs designed to support non-collegiate educational programs for which teachers are needed.

These programs require the skills associated with early childhood learning, K-12 certified professionals and some post-secondary education. As such, the jobs in this family include positions often found in public and private pre-school, elementary, secondary and post-secondary programs such as teacher, master teacher and English language lecturer.

Entry into this field typically requires a formal program of teacher education and preparation with a bachelor’s degree as the minimum requirement. A master’s degree in an appropriate field, might be required for anyone seeking career growth by becoming a subject specialist in the classroom or an administrator.
