Conversation on China's Rise

Bio of Mr. James Fallows

A national correspondent for The Atlantic, James Fallows is one of America's most respected journalists. Based in China since 2006, he is now chronicling the country's explosive growth and its staggering ramifications for America and the world. Fallows graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Harvard University and studied economics at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. The author of several books, including Breaking the News, about the crisis facing contemporary news media, and Blind into Baghdad, about the lead-up to the War in Iraq, which is now required reading in many military programs, his latest book is Postcards from Tomorrow Square: Reports from China (January 2009).
