A Nation-State by Construction

Dynamics of Modern Chinese Nationalism

Suisheng Zhao

This is the first historically comprehensive, up-to-date analysis of the causes, content, and consequences of nationalism in China, an ancient empire that has struggled to construct a nation-state and find its place in the modern world. It shows how Chinese political elites have competed to promote different types of nationalism linked to their political values and interests and imposed them on the nation while trying to repress other types of nationalism. In particular, the book reveals how leaders of the PRC have adopted a pragmatic strategy to use nationalism while struggling to prevent it from turning into a menace rather than a prop.

Suisheng Zhao is Associate Professor at the University of Denver's Graduate School of International Studies, and Executive Director of its Center for China-U.S. Cooperation. He is the founder and editor of the Journal of Contemporary China and has authored and edited five books.

“Professor Zhao’s analysis, rich in historical data and comprehensive coverage, will become the standard comprehensive work on this pivotal subject. . . . Whether or not the the ‘pragmatic nationalism’ described by Zhao succeeds is of great moment to China’s people and the world.”

—David M. Lampton,
Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies

“In this volume Suisheng Zhao brilliantly deconstructs the term nationalism and explains how it has been variously used by Chinese leaders and elites in modern times. Zhao’s remarkable understanding of historical events and personalities enables him to illustrate how multiple forms of nationalism produced an eclectic affinity of ideas for political and social change that swept the Chinese nation and its people from one revolution to another. A stellar achievement!”
