The University of Denver’s Josef Korbel School of International Studies is one of the world’s leading schools for the study of international relations. Located in Denver, Colorado, the Josef Korbel School invites students from around the globe to think beyond the Beltway with innovative programs in international human rights, security, development, international administration, conflict resolution, and global finance, trade and economic integration.

Legacy of excellence

The School is named after its founder and first dean, Josef Korbel. A renowned scholar and diplomat, Dr. Korbel was also the father of Madeleine Albright, 64th U.S. Secretary of State. Since its founding in 1964, the Josef Korbel School has produced alumni who work to advance our connection with the global community. Indeed, graduates of the Josef Korbel School are shaping the world through careers in the public, private and nonprofit sectors. Noteworthy alumni include 66th U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and former Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army, General George W. Casey.

Dynamic, intellectually rigorous environment

Each student at the Josef Korbel School works collaboratively with internationally respected faculty who conduct world-class teaching and research on a range of pressing international issues. Our faculty is comprised of experts that offer unique perspectives on today’s global challenges. Furthermore, the Josef Korbel School is home to a number of research centers, institutes and clinics that provide yet another dimension to the School’s commitment to integrating teaching, research, and practical problem solving. These include:

- The Center for China-U.S. Cooperation
- The Center on Rights Development
- The Center for Middle East Studies
- The Center for the Study of Europe and the World
- The Collaborative Refugee and Immigrant Information Center
- The Conflict Resolution Institute
- The Frederick S. Pardee Center for International Futures
- The Human Trafficking Clinic
- The International Career Advancement Program
- The Sié Chêou-Kang Center in International Security and Diplomacy

Learn more about the Josef Korbel School of International Studies at www.du.edu/korbel or call 303.871.2544.