Master of Arts in International & Intercultural Communication
Joint Degree Program

This joint degree program allows students to benefit from the combined expertise and breadth of coursework available from both the Josef Korbel School of International Studies and the Department of Media, Film & Journalism Studies to develop their own specific area of specialization within 2 years. Students are required to complete a total of 60 credit hours (20 of these credits must be with International Studies).

Degree Requirements

Foundational Courses: 2 courses (8 credits)
- MFJS 4650 Global Media & Communication
- MFJS 4654 Intercultural Communication

MFJS Courses: 4 courses (16 credits)

JKSIS Courses: 4 courses (20 credits)

Research Methods: 1 course
Serves as 1 of the 4 courses required for MFJS or Korbel, unless taken in an outside department

Foreign Language Proficiency: Two-year college level proficiency in one language other than English (or the native language of the student) by graduation from the program

Internship/Thesis/SRP: 5 credits
Internships are 40 hours per credit

Electives: Electives to reach a total of 60 credits.
Limit of one 3000-level course; all other courses must be 4000-level.

Assessment: Students must register for a 0-credit assessment course during any quarter of the program as a means of compiling and evaluating their required coursework throughout their academic career.
- MFJS 4000 MFJS Graduate Assessment Requirement

Specialization: Students may follow any of the following specialization tracks or design their own:
- Global Health Communication
- Media, Globalization & Culture
- Global Environment
- Human Rights
- Global & Multicultural Strategic Communication (nonprofit or corporate)
- International Administration
- International Politics
- Media Practices & Production

Admissions

Applicants to the Master of Arts in International & Intercultural Communication joint degree program must submit one application through the University of Denver Graduate Admissions website.

For more information on the University of Denver application process and deadlines, please contact the Office of Graduate Studies by calling 303.871.2706 or emailing gradinfo@du.edu.

Advisors

Media, Film & Journalism Studies Advisor: Margie Thompson, mthompso@du.edu
Josef Korbel School Advisor: Tom Rowe, tom.rowe@du.edu

Additional Information

For more information, please consult the International & Intercultural Communication Program Handbook and/or the Media, Film & Journalism Studies website.

This description is not binding. For the most comprehensive and updated program descriptions and requirements, please review the IIC Handbook on Portfolio and information on the Media, Film & Journalism Studies website.