

Julie Sheehan is a licensed clinical social worker in private practice. Her specialties include working with mental health issues, communication and attachment, women's and couple's issues, and working with trauma. She has been an adjunct social sciences professor for several years, and her philosophy regarding education is that learning should be as interesting and fun as it is challenging.