"Multilingual Writers in the University: Some Strategies for Teachers"

Paul Kei Matsuda is Associate Professor of English at Arizona State University and former director of writing at the University of New Hampshire. His path-breaking interdisciplinary research into second language writing, which combines insights from linguistics, rhetoric, and composition studies, appears regularly in such leading journals in the field as College Composition and Communication, College English, International Journal of Applied Linguistics, Journal of Second Language Writing, and Written Communication; he is also the series editor of Parlor Press Series on Second Language Writing. Matsuda's research has earned him several awards, including the 2006 Richard Ohmann Award for the Outstanding Refereed Article published in College English from the National Council of Teachers of English, the 2004 TOEFL Outstanding Young Scholar Award from Educational Testing Service, and an honorable mention for the 2001 Journal of Second Language Writing Award for Best Article. A leader in the field, Matsuda is founding chair of the Symposium on Second Language Writing and the CCCC Committee on Second Language Writing; he has also served as the Chair of the Nonnative English Speakers in TESOL Caucus. During the summer of 2007 Matsuda served as International Visiting Researcher with the Graduate School of International Development at Nagoya University in Japan. His PhD is from Purdue University.
