“I was impressed with the University of Denver’s growing reputation, but even happier with the smaller, intimate feel that the IIC program offered. It was exactly what I was looking for and needed in a graduate program.”

DAVID BOGGS
CLASS OF 2015

WHAT SETS OUR PROGRAM APART?

- Flexible, customized coursework
- Tailored professional internships
- International fieldwork and research with faculty
- Career assistance and a global network of alumni
- Community of highly engaged students and faculty
- A passion for making a difference

MEDIA, FILM, AND JOURNALISM STUDIES
2490 S. Gaylord St., Denver, CO 80208
303-871-2166 | MFJS@du.edu
WWW.DU.EDU/AHSS/EXPLOREMEDIA
MA IN INTERNATIONAL AND INTERCULTURAL COMMUNICATION

Now, more than ever, the world needs individuals who recognize the importance and complexities of communication across cultural and geographic borders.

The M.A. in International and Intercultural Communication (IIC) program prepares you to understand and facilitate all modes of communication and media in a variety of local and global contexts, bridging the gap between both international and intercultural differences.

The MA in International and Intercultural Communication is a unique program offered jointly through the Department of Media, Film and Journalism Studies and the Josef Korbel School of International Studies. Students are able to choose from the wide variety of courses offered in each department to develop their own tailored areas of concentration. Additionally, students are able to take advantage of electives and internships to develop theoretical and applied expertise in their field of interest.

Choose a professional internship, master’s thesis, or substantial research paper as your culminating experience.

Coverdell Peace Corps Fellows Program:
All Returned Peace Corps Volunteers are guaranteed eight hours of academic credit and are prioritized for additional scholarship funding.

Our faculty equip you with the tools, background and knowledge to succeed professionally and personally. We empower you to create a purposeful life that exceeds your expectations.

“"I learned difficult skills, discovered how to navigate and better understand the complex world of international development, and defined how and where I could contribute."”

ERICHA GUDMASTAD | CLASS OF 2009

GRADUATE CERTIFICATE IN PUBLIC DIPLOMACY

The Graduate Certificate in Public Diplomacy is a joint program of the Department of Media, Film, and Journalism Studies and the Josef Korbel School of International Studies. The certificate combines classes in strategic communication and international relations and explores how governments and non-governmental actors use media and communication to inform, influence, and create dialogue with international publics. Develop a regional or thematic specialization, based on your interests, and prepare for careers in cultural diplomacy, nation branding, public affairs, health and development communication, and international strategic communication.

“"I’ve always been interested in research and teaching and practice. It was in IIC that I realized I could have a career that incorporates all of that."”

MEGHAN SOBEL | CLASS OF 2010