How I Discovered the Links Between Culture, Arts and Learning in my Strategic Communication Seminar

In the fall of 2014, as a wide-eyed University of Denver freshman, I attended my first concert at the Robert and Judi Newman Center for the Performing Arts. Learn More

From Peace Corps to IIC and Beyond

The MA in International & Intercultural Communication program is a partner with the Peace Corps’ Paul D. Coverdell Fellows Program. Current IIC student and returned Peace Corps fellow Kelly Hill interviewed three alumni to learn more about their experiences. Learn More

Should we be Selling Inclusive Excellence?

In November, our Multicultural Journalism students course published a special issue of the Clarion focused on the racial climate at DU. MA in Media & Public Communication student Sarah Leiser reported on the University’s widespread use of the term “Inclusive Excellence.” Learn More

FACULTY SPOTLIGHT
Andrew Matranga
Andrew Matranga finds ways to stay one step ahead of the game, offering his skills and vision for what journalism on campus can look like in the years ahead. Learn More

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT
Sawyer D’Argonne
In many ways, Sawyer D’Argonne has reached the goal that many recent graduates dream of: a 2015 alumnus of the journalism program at DU, he graduated with his MA in investigative journalism in 2016 from Columbia University and is now a writer for Sky-Hi News in Granby, Colorado.

Learn more

MFJS SHOWCASE
Students and faculty continue to achieve
MFJS students, faculty, and alumni are up to some exciting things. Read more about our recent achievements.

Learn more

FEATURED STORY
The Impact of an Internship
Lance Clem, an MFJS alumnus and longtime public policy advocate, established an internship program for future MFJS students through his estate upon his passing in 2016. The Lance C. Clem Endowment for Media, Film, and Journalism Studies increases the available funds for paid internship credit — internships that are required for MFJS students.

Learn more

FEATURED EVENT
The Morton L. Margolin Distinguished Lecture
On January 30, the Departments of Media, Film & Journalism Studies and Economics hosted macroeconomist, former reporter, and DU alum Dean Baker (MA ’83) as the 2018 Morton L. Margolin Distinguished Lecturer.

Learn more

UPCOMING EVENT
Real News Day and the 25th Anniversary Estlow Center Anvil of Freedom Award Lecture
We are proud to announce that, in honor of the 25th anniversary of the Estlow International Center for Journalism & New Media's Anvil of Freedom Award and in conjunction with the Denver Press Club, Friday, April 27th will be honored by the Denver Press Club and the University of Denver as Real News Day.

Learn more

Tell us about your career and personal accomplishments, awards, life events or whatever else is keeping you busy. Share your news with fellow MFJS or IIC alumni by submitting a note to MFJS@du.edu.

Make sure to follow us on Facebook and Twitter to catch all the latest on our alumni, students, and faculty!