

August 11, 2026

Hello colleagues,

Beginning August 17, 2026, there will be a change to University of Denver Zoom licensing that affects student-hosted meetings.

Under the new licensing model, students who host their own Zoom meetings will be limited to meetings of up to 40 minutes and will no longer be able to record Zoom meetings.

What does this mean?

Students who use Zoom to host meetings for student organizations, group projects, study sessions, or student events; meetings will end after 40 minutes and are not able to be recorded.

Are faculty and staff impacted?

No, there are no changes to faculty and staff Zoom licensing at this time.

What video meeting and recording options are available to students?

All students have access to both Zoom and Microsoft Teams.

Microsoft Teams is recommended for student-hosted meetings that need to exceed the 40-minute Zoom time limit. Teams also provides chat, file sharing, and collaboration features through the University's Microsoft 365 environment.

Zoom may be used for hosting and attending meetings; however, student-hosted meetings are limited to 40 minutes, and recording functionality is not available.
