RESEARCH INTERESTS

My primary interest is interpersonal violence, with a focus on intimate partner violence. Specifically, I am interested in examining partner violence in vulnerable populations as well as how service providers in various roles collaborate to address partner violence. I also have an interest in high-risk youth, including homeless and LGBTQ youth and their experiences with victimization.

TEACHING INTERESTS

Given my research and professional history, I am primarily interested in teaching non-clinical introductory social work and research-related courses, such as Research Methods, Program Evaluation, and Social Work with Communities and Organizations. I am also interested in teaching elective courses centering on partner violence. I enjoy teaching in both traditional and online classrooms.
