ONGOING RESEARCH SUPPORT

Working Together: The Impact of Denver's Multidisciplinary Response Team (MDT) on Caregiver Engagement and Child Outcomes following Child Abuse and Neglect.

Barton Institute

August 2018-June 30, 2019

Role: PI with J. Dmitrieva

Following child abuse or neglect reports to law enforcement, children and their families can become involved in investigations that span multiple government systems including child welfare, criminal justice, and health agencies. In the face of this complex investigative process, caregivers may become confused, intimidated, or alienated, which can decrease engagement and negatively affect child outcomes. Little research is available on the efficacy of multidisciplinary teams (MDTs) as a strategy to increase caregiver engagement, reduce out-of-home placements, and improve child and family outcomes. This project will examine variation in program referral to the MDT using administrative data and propose a strategy for leveraging that variation to design a causal evaluation of MDT efficacy. Surveys of caregiver engagement along with the results of a causal evaluation of MDT will inform programmatic decisions in the City of Denver. The results will also be positioned to inform state-level policy decisions around the expansion of Denver's approach to MDT across the state.

VOCA Funding to Colorado Evaluation

State of Colorado, Department of Public Safety, Office of Victims of Crime

7/1/2017-6/30/2020

Role: PI

Total: $24,958 (Direct only $22,689)

This evaluation assesses the impact of victim service funding by the State of Colorado on agency/organization training needs, agency infrastructure, community training needs, and service needs, including for specific groups (e.g. LGBTQ clients).

* Randomized clinical trial to reduce substance use and victimization in homeless youth.

National Institute on Drug Abuse

9/15/2015-9/30/2018

PI: Kim Bender, Ph.D., Graduate School of Social Work, University of Denver

Role: co-I

Total: $396,900 (Direct only: $263,271)

This randomized clinical trial tests the impact of a mindfulness-based intervention on victimization and substance use outcomes among homeless youth, relatively to usual care in a homeless shelter.

 The impact of a forensic collaborative for older adults on criminal justice and victim outcomes: A randomized-control, longitudinal design*

National Institute of Justice (2013-MU-CX-0032)

3/1/2014-12/31/2018

Role: PI

$622,283 (Direct only: $438,689)

An estimated 11% of older adults have experienced maltreatment, while financial exploitation costs older adults $2.9 billion annually. Given the complexity of service needs and legal issues in older adult cases, researchers and practitioners have increasingly called for the development of multidisciplinary, forensic collaboratives to respond to victims. To date, no tests of the impact of forensic collaboratives on victim- and criminal justice-focused outcomes exist. The primary goal of this proposal is to conduct a rigorous, randomized-control evaluation of the impact of the Denver Forensic Collaborative (DFC), a victim-focused, forensic multidisciplinary team, relative to usual care (UC) on criminal justice as well as victim physical and mental health outcomes.

 Wrap Around Legal Services for Victims of Crime*

Office of Victims of Crime (2012-VF-GX-K018)

11/1/2012-9/30/2018

Role: Research PI

Subcontract: $383,646 (Direct only: $300,380)

This project examines legal needs of crime victims in Denver to inform the development and implementation of wrap-around legal services that take into account the complex issues (including psychological symptoms) facing crime victims. Grant awarded to Rocky Mountain Victim Law Center for program implementation with subcontract to DePrince for research component.

COMPLETED RESEARCH SUPPORT

Externally-funded projects:

Expanding Use of the Social Reactions Questionnaire among Diverse Women

National Institute of Justice (2012-W9-BX-0049)

1/1/2013-6/30/2017

Role: PI

$499,812 (Direct only: $341,667)

This project addressed the need to understand social reactions of different actors following sexual assault, including reactions from social support system members (e.g., family/partners versus friends); criminal justice-based personnel (e.g., law enforcement, system-based advocates, prosecution); and community-based victim service providers (e.g., rape crisis personnel, medical personnel, counselors, community-based advocates). We examined women's reports of social reactions to sexual assault longitudinally, testing hypotheses about the inter-relationships among social reactions, victim well-being, and criminal justice variables (e.g., victim engagement).

Preventing Revictimization in Teen Dating Relationships: A Randomized Control Trial with Adolescent Girls in Foster Care.

National Institute of Justice (NIJ-2009-MU-MU-0025)

10/1/2009-08/31/2013

Role: PI

$777,813 (Direct only: $535,588)

This project drew on the dating violence and sexual revictimization (RV) literatures to test two interventions to decrease revictimization risk in adolescent teens, one of which focused on gender socialization and the other which focused on risk detection. The project involved collaboration with Human Service agencies to recruit teen girls in foster care.

Trauma History and Symptoms among Women Exposed to Domestic Human Trafficking

Colorado Campus Compact

10/1/2011-6/30/2013

Role: PI

$750

This pilot study focused on documenting domestic trafficking victims' trauma histories and symptoms as well as service needs; this research was used to inform developing policy and practice in Denver in collaboration with our study partners at the Denver District Attorney's Office and Denver Police Department. Role: PI.

Deployment-focused development of depression treatment for victimized youth.

National Institute of Mental Health (1 R34 MH080102-01A1)

6/1/2008-5/31/2012

PI: Stephen Shirk

Role: co-PI

$586,790 (Direct only $447,840)

This primary goal of this R34 application was to develop and conduct an initial evaluation of a modified cognitive-behavioral treatment (m-CBT) for depressed adolescents with histories of interpersonal trauma. Treatment modifications are based on the hypothesis that standard CBT does not address two factors central to depression in trauma-exposed youth: 1.) deficits in executive function; and 2.) trauma-related cognitions. Because a history of interpersonal trauma is prevalent among depressed adolescents in community clinics, this project used a deployment-focused model of treatment development in order to create a "clinic-ready" intervention.

Supplement to Deployment-focused development of depression treatment for victimized youth.

The Effectiveness of Coordinated Outreach in Intimate Partner Violence Cases: A Randomized, Longitudinal Design

National Institute of Justice (2007-WG-BX-0002)

7/01/2007-3/1/2011

Role: PI

$499,880 (Direct only: $361,957)

This study tested the impact of a community-coordinated response program on criminal justice and well-being outcomes following intimate partner violence (IPV). In partnership with community- and criminal justice-based agencies, the project used a randomized control design to evaluate an innovative outreach program for IPV victims whose cases came to the attention of the criminal justice system. Results from this project inform program development, policy decisions, and extension of the program to other jurisdictions.

Safe from the Start Program

Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, Department of Justice, 2010-2011

Tony Grampas Youth Services (TGYS) Program, 2005-2010

Sexual Assault Prevention Fund, 2005-2009

Role: Consultant

Denver Children's Advocacy Center implemented a Safe from the Start program with preschool- and school-aged children and their caregivers to provide education about child safety. The goals of the program were to reduce childhood sexual abuse by increasing children's and parent's understanding of child safety and community resources for child abuse. In my role as Consultant on three grants (local and federal) funding this work, I assisted with program evaluation (e.g., selection of measures, data analyses).

Cognitive and brain processes in individuals with childhood interpersonal trauma.

National Institute of Child Health and Development

Marie Banich, Ph.D. (University of Colorado Boulder), PI.

Role: co-PI.

$147,261

The project examined executive function in adult women exposed to childhood abuse using imaging (fMRI) and behavioral methods.

Development of the Trauma Appraisal Questionnaire

National Institute of Mental Health (1 R03 MH068624-01A1)

3/01/2004-2/28/2007

Role: PI

$138,606 (Direct only: $100,328)

The major goal of this project was the development and validation of a self-report measure of trauma appraisals (e.g., fear, shame, betrayal). Development and validation of the measure occurred across three phases of study: item generation (Phase I), item analysis, establishment of internal consistency and construct validity (Phase II), and establishment of criterion validity (Phase III).

A Multimethod Approach to Understanding Risk Detection Following Trauma

National Institute of Mental Health (1 F31MH079769-01A1)

8/1/2007-7/31/2008

Role: Sponsor

$40,935

This study examined risk detection as a function of violence exposure. In particular, the study tested the prediction that risk detection operates differently depending on the woman's physiological reactivity and subjective experience of reactivity.

Explicit memory in children exposed to domestic violence

National Institute of Mental Health (F31MH06927-02)

2003-2004

Role: Sponsor

This project evaluated memory function with respect to domestic violence exposure and posttraumatic symptoms in school-aged children. Children (and guardians) were recruited from community sites, including domestic violence shelters.

University-funded projects:

Elder Maltreatment Risk and Consequences

University of Denver

7/1/2012-12/30/2014

Role: co-PI with Leslie Hasche

$48,917

The current project assesses risk factors for and consequences of elder maltreatment (i.e., abuse, neglect, or financial exploitation), along with exploration of the service needs of older adults at risk for maltreatment. The study involves partnership with the Justice Program for Older Adults of Denver (an interdisciplinary coalition of legal, adult protective services, intimate partner violence, and senior service agencies).

Preventing Victimization among Homeless Youth

University of Denver PROF

7/1/2012-8/15/2014

Role: co-PI with Kim Bender

$28,484

The current study addresses the public health problem of violence exposure among homeless youth. We will test an intervention that aims to reduce revictimization among homeless youth by focusing on youth's abilities to detect and respond to potentially dangerous situations and people, referred to as risk detection. The goals of this project are: to develop a manualized intervention for reducing homeless youths' street victimization; to test the feasibility of providing this intervention to a sample of homeless youth in Denver; and to determine preliminary outcomes associated with the intervention.

Links between child abuse and teen dating violence

Partners in Scholarship Research Associate Grant, University of Denver

6/2012- 8/2012

Role: Faculty mentor

This project involved a faculty-undergraduate partnership (with Amber Morse) to examine links between child abuse and teen dating violence among teens girls in the child welfare system.

Preventing revictimization: Testing two interventions with high risk adolescent girls.

University of Denver, Professional Research Opportunities for Faculty (PROF) Award

7/01/2009-6/30/2011

Role: PI

$19,720

This project drew on the dating violence and sexual revictimization (RV) literatures to test two interventions to decrease revictimization risk in adolescent teens who had come to the attention of the child welfare system for exposure to child maltreatment.

Risks for and Correlates of Multiple Victimizations in Women

Partners in Scholarship Research Associate Grant, University of Denver

Role: Faculty mentor

6/2010- 8/2010

This project involved a faculty-undergraduate partnership (with Jenna Lindsay-Brisbin) to examine risk detection and revictimization among teens girls in the child welfare system.

Trauma appraisals: Extending research to non-North American countries.

University of Denver, Internationalization Grant

7/01/2009-12/31/2009

Role: PI

$2,000

How do the types of appraisals people make in response to traumas relate to the type and severity of distress experienced? Given the importance of appraisals, and limitations of current measurement approaches, we developed and tested the initial psychometric properties of the Trauma Appraisal Questionnaire (TAQ). An important next step in the development of the TAQ and research on posttraumatic appraisals more generally is to examine these processes cross-culturally. To that end, I will collaborate with colleagues in the Netherlands and New Zealand to extend this work to non-North American samples.

Revictimization Risk and Executive Function in Recent Female Crime Victims: A Prospective Evaluation

University of Denver, Professional Research Opportunities for Faculty (PROF) Award

7/01/2007-10/01/2008

Role: PI

$13,850

This study tested an innovative hypothesis that deficits in executive function (EF) performance contributes to revictimization. Executive functions include a range of cognitive skills involving attention (the ability to shift, inhibit and focus attention), manipulation of information in working memory, self-monitoring, and planning and execution of behaviors. We proposed that EF deficits underlie difficulties detecting and responding to threat in potentially victimizing situations, thereby increasing revictimization risk.

Child Maltreatment, Attention and Memory

Professional Research Opportunities for Faculty (PROF) Award, University of Denver

7/01/2004-8/31/2006

Role: PI

$15,000

This project tested the prediction that maltreatment by a caregiver will be associated with specific alterations in basic attention and memory abilities; such alterations increase maltreated children's risk for school-related problems. Children who have been exposed to a range of traumas (e.g., maltreatment by caregiver, natural disaster, community violence) and control children (no trauma) were tested on measures of attention, memory, and school achievement (N=119). Study results will be applied to developing cost effective interventions to help maltreated children succeed in the classroom.

Risks for and Correlates of Multiple Victimizations in Women

Partners in Scholarship Research Associate Grant, University of Denver

6/2006- 8/2006

Role: Faculty mentor

This project involved an undergraduate Research Associate, Reilly Anderson, in summer research efforts to examine risk for and correlates of multiple victimizations among women exposed to crime.

Returning Trauma Research to Our Community

Public Good Grant, University of Denver

2/1/2005-1/31/2006

Role: Faculty

$8,000

Service agencies working with children, adults and families exposed to violence often have limited access to cutting edge research that would inform their services. As part of the current project, researchers from DU's Traumatic Stress Studies Lab and our Denver collaborators presented on current research and provided consultation regarding research issues to more than 125 participants from community agencies working with children, families, and adults exposed to violence. The meeting program was developed in consultation with our community partner, Victim Services Network. As a follow-up to the meeting, we developed and launched a new website to disseminate research-related information to victim service providers in the community.

6/2005- 8/2005

Role: Faculty mentor

This project involved an undergraduate Research Associate, Julia Burrell-Smith, in a summer research efforts to examine cognition and distress in a community sample of adults.

Returning research to the community: Research on the effects of trauma

Rosenberry Fund, University of Denver

4/01/2004-3/30/2005

Role: PI

$1,000

The major goal of this project was to build partnerships between researchers and social service agencies working with children, families and adults exposed to trauma. I organized a half-day conference in which research from my lab and other labs in the Denver metro area was presented to participants from community social service agencies.
